

Good Is the New Bad (Part 1)

π 10

CUE: MAL: Well, I guess we'd better be "good" then, huh? No tricks, no pranks – and definitely no magic. Right?
CARLOS: (realizing she's lying) ... Riiiiight.

(The EVILS have caused chaos. AURADONIANS run offstage, scared. One is crying.)

AUDREY: Ugh! Did anyone see that?!

(Transition to: Chemistry class. MAURICE, Belle's kooky father, presides over class like Einstein on too much coffee. Among the class are EVIE, MAL, DOUG, AUDREY, and CHAD.)

MAURICE: Can anyone here tell me the atomic weight of silver! How 'bout— Chad.

CHAD: Uh... five?

MAURICE: No, Chad. No. Anyone else? Anyone?

EVIE: (whispered, re: Chad) Doug! Any chance he's in line for the throne? Anywhere in line?

DOUG: Who, Chad? He's Prince Charming Jr., Cinderella's son. But there's— not a lot of there-there, ya know?

EVIE: Looks like it's there-there to me.

MAURICE: How about... Evie.

(The OTHER STUDENTS chuckle, mocking EVIE for getting caught talking.)

AURADONIANS (taunting her): Ohhhhhhhhhh!

EVIE (puts on a brave face): Yes, Professor Maurice?

MAURICE: The atomic weight of silver.

EVIE: Atomic weight? That's so easy, it's just protons plus neutrons times—

(EVIE clearly knows the answer. But then she looks at CHAD.)

EVIE: (cont'd.) I mean... I dunno. It can't weigh very much, right? It's an atom.

(CHAD laughs. EVIE beams, but tries to play it cool.)

MAURICE: The number, if you please.

EVIE: Let's see... "How do I find the average atomic weight of silver?"
